Good mister Monster, pray, how big art thou? [made?
What is thy shape? How art thou Art fashion'd like a fish, snake, horse, or how?
Come to the land and talk with me;
Be not afraid, [thee.
And I will tell thee what folks think of

ON A TASTE FOR THE FINE ARTS.

The principle or faculty of taste, though generally diffused through the human species, often lies almost entirely dormant, for want of cultivation. The savage Indian, wholly occupied in providing for the necessities of life, traverses the desart and the flowry lawn, with equal indifference. Eager in the chase, he scarcely turns his eye, as he passes along, to contemplate the golden beams of the setting sun, reflected from the broad expanse of some adjacent lake—he passes inattentive the awful cataract, and views the most splendid scenes in the creation, with slight and transient emotions. Nor are the generality of men, even in civilized society, or in the higher walks of life, fully qualified to comprehend or to admire the assemblage of beauties, which the visible creation presents to the view of an enlightened imagination. Single objects, or detached parts, attract the notice and engross the attention, and the mind, by an easy transition, passes to the recognition and relish of those operations of human skill, which are their symbols or representations; for the elegant arts are all imitative in their essence and origin. Thus music, by the variation of its movements and tones, calls up into the mind, ideas, both of the natural, animal and rational world.—The murmuring brook, the boistrous ocean, the stormy wind, and gentle zephyr, the wild roar of the lion, the bleating of the lamb, and the plaintive melody of the nightingale, are all within the compass of its mimetic enchantments. These are extended even to the passions and emotions of the human heart, so as to typify anger, pity, remorse, delight and sorrow. Painting occupies a still wider field of similitude and association. Even motions and sounds may be expressed by this wonderful art.—For, as they are accompanied in many instances with a certain configuration, or position of parts, the sign is readily adopted for the thing signified; and we see or hear, upon the canvas, the horse starting aghast at the sudden view of the lion; the soldier running towards his dying general with the news of victory—the cock crowing at the denial of Peter—and the water fall dashing against the rocks below.

Poetry derives most of its charms from allusions, similies, metaphors, or descriptions; and these are obviously imitative. In this way its powers are so transcendant that even a single epithet will sometimes produce a representation more picturesque than the pencil of Poussin or Salvator Rosa ever exhibited.

"Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And all the air a solemn stillness holds,
Save where the beetle wheels his droning flight,
And drowsy tinklings lull the distant folds." Gray.

The accuracy and force of the word glimmering, must be felt by any one, who has viewed with attention an extensive prospect, about an hour after sun-set.

The mimetic arts have some advantages over nature herself: for the imitations with which they present us are generally agreeable, even though their archetypes be, in themselves, indifferent or disgusting. The mind delights in comparison, and this pleasure is heightened by the recognition of resemblance; and by the contemplation of ingenious design or masterly execution.

The energies of music, painting and poetry, are so powerful and multifarious, that they have at command all the emotions and passions of the soul. They may excite or restrain, kindle or extinguish passion: and thus, according to their application, become the instruments either of vice or of virtue.—They are incident, likewise, to numberless adventitious associations, which, counteracting or diversifying their natural and original tendency, may make them administer to vanity, ostentation, pride, envy and jealousy.

Whoever, therefore, yields himself implicitly to the magic delusions of the fine arts, is in danger of having his judgment impaired, his heart corrupted, and his capacity destroyed for the ordinary duties and enjoyments of life. To this source may be traced all the follies and extravagance of what is termed VERTU.

Admiration stimulates the desire of possession, however immoderate the price; posession turns the admiration of the object to ourselves; and this is succeeded by a fond and absurd impatience, to display a superiority over others, both in taste and property.

"What's brought Sir Visto's ill-got wealth to waste?
Some Demon whispered, 'Visto, have a taste.'" Pope.

But it is further to be observed, that as an acute relish for beauty, and a quick discernment of deformity are, in a certain proportion, necessarily connected together, the latter may become predominant, through pride, affectation, or too frequent indulgence. Whenever this happens, taste will prove the instrument of pain, and not of pleasure; and the fastidious feelings of disgust, so often excited, will be transferred from the works of human skill to human life; rendering the temper petulent, morose and selfish. But a perversion of the powers of the imagination, is no argument against their proper culture and well regulated application. For reason itself is liable to abuse; and philosophy and religion have been rendered subservient to scepticism and superstition. Z.

ALEXANDRIA:

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1817.

MR. EDITOR,

We are not surprised that your correspondent, M. B. should be so extremely in haste to shift his dilemma to the subject of "infallibility:" for, in our humble opinion, no writer ever stood more in need of that subterfuge to cover his dogmas, and to redress his want of proofs and authorities. But, before even this resource will avail him, he must demonstrate his own infallibility, as well as that of his church. Until he has done this, he must excuse us if we still consider the testimony of history, of the bulls of Popes, and of the articles of his own general councils, as higher authority than his own assertions unsupported as they are by a single voucher.

Whether "Catholics acknowledge civil power in the Pope" or no, he has been able to convince the world by terrible arguments, that he possessed it in great style. He maintained it too upon the ground of Divine right. The Lateran council confirmed him in that right, although some of the ultramontane states were extremely restless under this lordly discipline, which gave the Pope jurisdiction within their own dominions. We could multiply our proofs upon this point to any amount, but really, if the eighteen writers of his own church which we have named, if the bulls of Popes themselves, and his own council will have no weight, we think that no proofs would affect this credulous incredulity. There is one thing here that surprises us exceedingly. "Bellarmine a great divine," says, & M. B. also intimates that the Pope is infallible. The Jesuits of the College of Clermont declared that "the Popes are as infallible as Jesus Christ himself." How is it then, that, in the present case, they are not only stripped of their infallibility, but that they do not understand their own doctrine as well as M. B. does himself? Fine specimen this of the boasted excellence of a system, which values itself principally, for its tendency to preserve the unity of the faith!

We will not follow the example of this "good & polite correspondent." in making the "retort courteous" of "falsehood & misrepresentation." But we cannot help thinking it unkind in him to disfigure our case by assertions which he had an opportunity of ascertaining to be groundless. 1st. He asserts that we have brought no other authority to support our theory of the Italian republics than Mr. Adams. But did we not cite Villers also as entertaining the same opinion? If Mr. Adams were our only authority, yet has M. B. condescended to give us even one on his side? We could give him as many more as he pleases, but certainly, these names must weigh as much as his anonymous opinions. 2d. He says that we abandoned the subject of indulgencies, &c. implying that we had been beaten on these points & compelled to give them up as untenable. But does he not know that we mutually compromised to postpone that subject till we had disposed of the previous questions? 3d. "He adds thanks be to God and the good cause, you have not said a word on the subject of Catholic intolerance for a long time;" intimating that he had drove us from this ground also. But in that very "theological ledger" which was then kindling his ire, and which he was then attempting to answer, did we not say a good deal about this intolerance? Did we not repeat to him his articles and catechisms which declare that "without this Catholic faith no one can be saved?" Did we not institute the unanswerable comparison between the tolerance of Protestant countries with the intolerance of those places in which the Roman religion prevails? We should not think it necessary thus to go over this ground and to take notice of points already sufficiently illustrated, but that we may convince this writer that he must not expect to succeed in an artifice by which he designs to beguile the public of the just recollection of facts. How can such "manœuvres" be reconciled with candour and propriety by one, who makes such loud professions of both, and who is so lavish of opprobrious epithets towards those, whom he, and he alone thinks fit to charge with "cunning and misrepresentation?"

The defence of the Jesuits partakes of the same want of regard to proofs. Passing by the 18 names which we gave as our authority, M. B. has taken up the name of Pascal alone, and pronouncing him unworthy of belief because he was a Jansenist, concludes that this is a sufficient offset to the mass of evidence derived from all these writers: It is well known that the Jansenists were as violent Roman Catholics, and wrote as vehemently against the reformation, as any people in the world: As for Pascal, we appeal to Dupin, and other Roman Catholic historians, for the truth of our affirmation that he lived and died in the communion and perfect confidence of the Roman church. The argument founded upon the fact that the secreta monita contain principles subversive of civil government, and morals and religion, which M. B. thinks is prima facie evidence against the book, is the very consideration which, in our judgement, corroborates its authenticity. It corresponds well with the overt acts of the society in China, Japan, and America, in Portugal, Bohemia, and France, and other places, whence they have been expelled upon the avowed ground of their "holding principles subversive of morals and government." The influence they had in all kingdoms, and their immediate connection with the Pope, as his sworn life guards, renders the consideration of their case a legitimate argument in an attempt to shew the value of a reformation, which tends to extirpate this fruitful branch of tyranny and corruption.

We have not, as M. B. declares, confined the influence of the reformation to the United Provinces and England. We have referred also to the United States as one of the noblest trophies of that grand event. We refer to the humiliation of the colossal power of Austria, and the Germanic confederation, which created the balance of power in Europe, "the fruitful thought of which," says Villers" appears never to have entered the mind of legislators, before that period." We refer to all the protestant countries in the world, and for proof, compare them with Spain and Portugal and other Roman Catholic States.—Notwithstanding all that can be said about the civil disabilities of Roman Catholics in England, it is yet undeniable that their privileges are infinitely greater in that country than those accorded to protestants in any Roman Catholic country whatever. "For it must be confessed" (says Villers, page 125) that the Catholic states push this intolerance much further than the most intolerant reformists." We entirely disapprove of any establishments in religion; but it is certain that the privileges of Roman Catholics and other dissenters in England are as much respected and secured, as is compatible with the nature of an establishment. The question then occurs on the propriety of an establishment: but it will no longer be a question with M. B. provided the establishment be Roman Catholic. The history of the world proves that although Roman Catholics, in the day of humiliation, talk much about tolerance, yet when the day of their power has succeeded; they have always acted as though they thought that toleration was the most intolerable thing in the world. We hope, for the sake of humanity, that we shall not be compelled to search the records of the inquisition, or to call up such scenes as followed the revocation of the edict of Nantz, for the bloody proofs of this assertion. We have reason, indeed, to say, with deep and devout emphasis, "thanks be to God and the good cause," that we are not this day in a Roman Catholic country. If we were, we should afford to some opponents that triumph, which would, of all others, be most grateful to their hearts—that of seeing us overwhelmed by such arguments as leave behind them the silence & stillness of the grave.

Our "opponent" would persuade the public that one reason why he does not refute our charges on the score of intolerance is, that we will not answer his questions. If he will ask us any question, on the distinguishing points of difference between Roman Catholicism and Protestantism, we will endeavor to satisfy his enquiry. But we cannot consent to give our opinion about the creed of any particular protestant church. Would it be decorous for him to ask us what we thought of the Presbyterian Confession of Faith, or the Creed of the Friends? His question as to the Athanasian creed is equally irrelevant. But we will, notwithstanding, go so far as to tell him that we entirely approve of its rejection from all the formularies of the churches in this country. As to what will become of heretics, really, we do not like to be compelled to sit in judgment on them. We cannot see the necessity of our interfering with the prerogatives of Him who says "Judge nothing before the time. Vengeance is mine. I will recompense, saith the Lord."

FIELD OF WATERLOO.

The following particulars have been communicated by a person of this town just returned from a tour through the Netherlands.

The village of Waterloo and its environs are, at this moment, perhaps, more interesting to an English visitor than at any period since the battle. The numerous affecting testimonials to the memory of different illustrious individuals who fell in that terrible conflict, meet the eye at almost every direction. The interior of the church of Waterloo, a small but very neat structure, is nearly covered with monuments to the memory of British officers. All of these are written in such a strain of manly and modest simplicity, and some of them under circumstances of such affecting tenderness, that every English reader, whilst his heart is touched with the deepest sympathy, must feel himself elated in belonging to a country which has produced instances of such unparalleled heroism.

In the church yard, among other monuments, appears the mausoleum of the marquis of Anglesea's leg, with an inscription that reflects the highest honor on that distinguished nobleman.

To the wall of La Haye Sainte, on the high road, is affixed a plain marble monument, with a short, but most sublime and touching inscription, to the honor of those officers of the German Legion who fell in the arduous task of defending that farm against an entire division of the French army. It is erected by the surviving officers of that distinguished regiment to the memory of their departed brethren.

The celebrated chateau of Hougoumont remains in the state in which it was left after the battle—a heap of ruins. The marks of the shot still remain on the trees and garden wall, where the English guards fought with such persevering and undubbed energy.

A splendid monument is now erecting in the open field, on the very spot where the hero fell, to the memory of Alexander Gordon, of whom such distinguished me-

THOUGHTS IN SEASON.

The late intelligence from Europe ... not furnish much interest to our rea... Men possessing large ... erty were marked out as the victims ... is revolution. The people were told ... these rich landholders and opulent ... chants, occasioned the famine, under ... h the poor were suffering. In the ... time, men of wealth and cha... , were exerting every nerve to mi... the severities of the season. Cha... le societies were formed, composed ... ranks and classes, to administer me... assistance to the sick, employment ... ose who were able to labour for their ... subsistence, and benevolent contri... ns to those who could not. Even ... effort to relieve the miseries of the ... ring classes was violently opposed ... ose very persons for whose ease and ... rt this beneficent arrangement was ... ded. It may now be asked—sup... this insurrection had taken place? ... the members of the royal family, the ... ity, and the clergy, had been bro't ... criminately to the block, with all ... men of opulence in England—would ... condition of the poorer classes have ... rendered happier by such a sacri... ? In the mutual scramble for proper... hen justice, with bloody wings, had ... from the consecrated tribunals to ... ven, would those who have made ... hands thick with brothers' blood, have reaped the benefits of such a sacrifice? No! they would still have suffered all the miseries of poverty, with all the horrors of murder superadded: they would have gone supperless to bed—and they would be awakened by the light step of the assassin, who would be watching over their slumbers.

One more annual revolution of heaven's bountiful orb, has by the working of Almighty Providence, in secresy and in silence, banished all these multiplied evils, and spread over the world that we inhabit, abundance and joy.—The treasures of the earth have been quickened and invigorated, by that celestial munificence that sparkles in every beam, blossoms in every flower, and ripens in all the fruits. Those individuals who formerly meditated carnage and death to their fellow men, may now repose their heads upon their pillows, and welcome the daily arrival of heaven's glorious orb, the representative of our Creator's munificence. It cannot be too often impressed on the minds of our fellow men, that little, very little, can be done by government to alleviate the miseries of its subjects. We are all made the victims of the flashing thunderbolt, and of the whirlwind—martyrs to a conflagration, a storm or a deluge, pestilence and famine, in despite of all that kings, lords, commons, emperors, or presidents can do. The proudest monarch, surrounded as he is by the blaze of his own diamonds, trembles at such seasons like the meanest slave who cowers at his feet for mercy. We are all subjects of disease and death, whether we are denominated kings, emperors, or subjects. During the seasons of such visitations of Divine Providence, no man, whose heart is alive to the impulse of humanity, would endeavour to arm repining poverty with the dagger of the assassin. The hostility of the poor against the rich, is at all times sufficiently vindictive, and it is no part of justice or humanity, to make the condition of the suffering poor more wretched, by the excitation of such unnatural animosity. If there had been an equal division of property, according to the Spencean system, in three days afterwards, there would be the same inequality in the division of property, that there is now.

New-York, Sept. 8.

Captain Taylor, in 28 days from Tobago, informs that a Spanish schooner, with 150 passengers, had arrived there from Augustura, where the Royalists had been completely defeated. Eighteen vessels in all had escaped with passengers; six of which had passed Tobago.

It is stated by the Portuguese Captain Pontes, from Lisbon, that two frigates of that nation had recently captured three privateers, or piratical vessels, one of which was sent into Lisbon. One of the crew of this vessel informed that they had captured an English and an American vessel, and murdered every one of the crews. In consequence of this information, the whole crew of the pirate were sentenced to be hung.

Public Sale,

Of Dwelling Houses and Land

I WILL offer for sale, at public auction, at the Merchants' Coffee-House in Alexandria, on the 15th of September, at half past 12 o'clock, P. M. a two story Brick Dwelling House and Lot, on the east side of Washington-street, in Alexandria, between Prince and Duke-streets, being the southernmost house of three two story brick houses built by Jonathan Scholfield. The title is clear.—One thousand dollars will be required on the first of February next, and the residue in four equal annual payments thereafter—the whole purchase money to be satisfactorily secured and to bear interest from the first of October next, when possession will be given. ALSO,

A Dwelling House and about 253 acres of Land, in Fairfax County, within three miles from Alexandria, more than one-third of which is woodland. The dwelling house is of wood, well built, & may make a comfortable and very healthy residence. The land is capable of great improvement by the use of plaster and clover. ALSO,

Thirty-eight and half acres of Wood-Land, about half a mile nearer town, and affording a handsome scite for building.

For the house & land in Fairfax county five hundred dollars will be required in hand, one thousand dollars on the first of July next, and the residue in six equal annual instalments thereafter—the whole purchase money to bear interest from the day of sale, and to be satisfactorily secured.—For further information apply to W. CRANCH.

A valuable Farm for Sale.

THE SUBSCRIBER will sell, on reasonable terms, a valuable and productive farm of 600 acres, or thereabouts—being part of the lands of the late Richard Brent, lying on Kettle Run in the county of Prince William, in the state of Virginia—20 miles from the Occoquan Mills—33 miles from Alexandria, and about the same distance from Georgetown and the City of Washington. This farm lies in the centre of an excellant neighborhood—is handsomely situated—abundantly watered, and has upon it an ample proportion of wood. The soil is naturally strong, and a considerable portion of it has for some years past, been cultivated according to the most approved rules of modern husbandry—Possession will be given on the first day of January next. The terms upon which this property will be sold, will be made known upon application to George L. Brent, of Stafford County, Va. or to the subscriber living in Alexandria.

Fauquier Land for Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his farm, called "CULLINS," situated in the county of Fauquier, on Kettle Run, and adjoining the lands of Messrs. Samuel Weaver, Jacob Weaver, and others. 7 miles from Fauquier Court House, 33 from Alexandria and 3 from the Buckland Mills, containing about 400 acres; a considerable portion of which is now in very heavy timber, the balance cleared and in cultivation, including about 80 acres of the first quality bottom land, which, with a small portion of labor, might be made to produce a large quantity of hay. This land lies well, and is in a good neighborhood, and finely watered, Kettle Run passing thro' the farm. To a person disposed to purchase land for the purpose of cultivating and improving it himself, the above offers great advantages, as the plaster Paris & clover acts on no land more efficaciously than on this.

Also, one other farm, lying immediately adjoining, containing the like number of 400 acres; about one half of which has been cleared, the balance well set in timber.

The above farms will be sold together or separately, as may suit purchasers—For terms, which will be liberal, apply to the subscriber, residing near the premises.

For the prevention and cure of BILIOUS AND MALIGNANT FEVERS is recommended

HAHN's ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings in several parts of the West Indies and in the Southern and Middle States, particularly in New-York Philadelphia Baltimore Petersburg Richmond Norfolk Edenton Wilmington Charleston and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons in each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe that a timely use of this salutary remedy has under Providence preserved their lives when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy founded on mere assertion.

It is not indeed presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience for believing that a dose of these Pills taken once in every two weeks during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which are often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold if taken on its first appearance: they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficatious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Lee's Infallible Ague and Fever Drops

For the cure of agues, remittent and intermittent fevers.

Hamilton's Worm-destroying Lozenges,

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes of every age and in every situation of various dangerous complaints arising from worms and from obstructions or foulness in their stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of as operating with violence; on the contrary a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is pertectly innocent & is so mild in its operation that it cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old should no worms exist in the body; but will without pain or griping cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion

Description of Worms, and the symptoms by which they are known.

Worms which infest the human body are chiefly of four kinds viz.—The Teres or large round worm; the Ascides or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina or short flat white worm; lastly, the Tænia or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums, itching in the nose, and about the seat, convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite. sometimes loathing food and sometimes voracious; purging with slimy and fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face bloated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent the vomiting and purging of children—a dreadful disorder which annually destroys thousands of the infant part of our citizens. It is likewise the mildest and most certain remedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

Hamilton's Essence and Extract of Mustard.

A safe and effectual remedy for rheumatisms gout palsy sprains and bruises white swellings old strains and relaxations numbness and weakness of the nerves pains of the side head ache swelled legs frozen limbs and every similar complaint. It prevents chilblains or chopped hands and the ill effects of getting wet or damp in the feet.

The Genuine Persian Lotion,

So celebrated among the fashionables throughout Europe, is an invaluable cosmetic, perfectly innocent and safe, free from corrosive and repellent mineral the basis of other lotions, and of unparalleled efficacy in removing blemishes of the face and skin freckles pimples inflamatory redness scurfs tetters worms sunburns prickly heat &c. The Persian Lotion operates mildly, without impeding the natural insensible perspiration which is essential to health, its effects are speedy and permanent rendering the skin delicately soft and smooth and improving the complexion.

The Damask Lip Salve—Restorative Powder for the teeth and gums.

This excellent preparation cleans and strengthens the gums, preserves the enamel from decay, and cleanses and whitens the teeth, by absorbing the acrimonious slime and foulness that is suffered to accumulate, never fails to injure and finally ruin them.

Hamilton's Grand Restorative

Is recommended as an invaluable medicine for the speedy relief and permanent cure of the various complaints arising from dissipated pleasures, indiscretions, residence in climates unfavourable to the constitution, the immoderate use of tea, frequent intoxication or any other destructive intemperance, the unskilful or excessive use of mercury, the diseases peculiar to females at certain period of life, bad lyings in &c.

Hamilton's Elixir for Coughs, Colds &c.

Celebrated for the cure of colds, inveterate coughs asthmas and approaching consumptions and a certain remedy for the hooping cough.

Hahn's genuine Eye Water.

A sovereign remedy for all diseases of the eyes, whether the effect of natural weakness or of accident.

Toothe Ache Drops.

The only remedy yet discovered that gives immediate and lasting relief in the most severe instances.

Lee's Ointment for the Itch.

Warranted an infallible remedy by one application, may be used with perfect safety on infants a week old, not containing a particle of mercury or any dangerous ingredient whatever, and not accompanied with that tormenting process which attends the application of other remedies.

Hahn's true & genuine German Plaister.

☞ At the place of sale pamphlets may be had gratis, describing the cures performed by the above medicines; the number, importance and respectability of which, fully justify every article of the advertisement. June 1
